PREFACE.

[N preparing for publication this record kept by my father for more than sixty years, great care has been taken to make it as accurate as possible.

However, there are probably many corrections still to be made, and it is feared also that to many it may be a disappointment; that while rather full sketches are given of certain members of the family, other names, just as dear and honored, are simply mentioned without a word of appreciation or of remembrance. But, conscious of my utter want of any literary skill, I have simply compiled from such press notices as are found among my father's papers these sketches of various members of the family.

I have also taken from the "Hastings Memorial," by Mrs. Lydia N. Buckminster, published in 1866, the few pages of special interest to us as descendants of Dr. Thomas Hastings, of Hatfield, eldest son of Deacon Thomas Hastings, of Watertown, Mass. As this book is out of print, and as few of the younger members of the family have access to it, I have prefaced my father's record with whatever seemed to be of interest to our branch in Mrs. Buckminster's work. Her book is largely devoted to the families of John Hastings, the second son of Samuel Hastings, the youngest son of Deacon Thomas Hastings, of Watertown.

From Prof. Herbert B. Adams' pamphlet, "The Thomas Adams and the Thomas Hastings Families of Amherst," I have also taken some items of interest regarding the two Hatfield physicians, Thomas Hastings, Sr., and his son, Thomas Hastings, Jr., grandfather and great-grandfather of Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr., whose family record is my father's own work.

A word of explanation is needed regarding the numbers given with the name of each individual. The descendants are numbered from the beginning and are traced according to their families. The marginal numbers give each person his place in the order of descent, and the several head numbers in the middle of the pages give the marriages of those who have entered the family relation, and other items of interest.

It was first intended to have this record reach the now scattered descendants of Dr. Seth Hastings, Senior, in 1897, the hundredth anniversary of his removal into the State of New York. However, since that was found to be impossible, it is hoped that it will not be less welcome, coming, as it does, at the beginning of the second century from that event.

While my heartfelt thanks are due for the good-will and encouragement which have so greatly helped me in my work as editor, it is simply just to say that the whole family is deeply indebted to Mrs. Sophia Hastings Douglass for her untiring efforts in collecting data and further assistance in every way, given by one who has been all her life devoted as very few are, to her kindred, and who probably knows more of the family in all its branches than any one now living.

It is earnestly hoped that this may be, to every member of the family, an acceptable presentation of our family history.

ANNA C. HASTINGS GOTTLIEB.

ROCHESTER,

November 23, 1898.

THE COAT OF ARMS.

THE coat of arms given in this volume was kindly drawn by Miss Helen M. Hastings, daughter of the late Albert M. Hastings, of Rochester.

It is taken from "Burke's Peerage," being the arms of the Earl of Huntingdon, whose family name is Hastings. However, as bearing the same name would give the American family no right to the use of the Huntingdon arms, it seems best to offer a word of explanation, especially since my uncle, Dr. P. M. Hastings, of Hartford, and my father, Francis H. Hastings, of Rochester, were two of the latest survivors of those who were familiar with the Hastings arms, and as it is upon their remembrance of the copper-plate bearing this device, that this engraving is confidently offered as that to which we have the right.

By reference to the record, it will be seen that our ancestor, Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr., was fourth in descent from Deacon Thomas Hastings, the first of our line to come to this country, and the one who must have brought this copper-plate of the family arms. It next passed to his eldest son, Dr. Thomas Hastings, first, and in turn to his son, Dr. Thomas Hastings, second. The eldest son of this second Dr. Hastings to reach maturity (two elder sons, both named Thomas, had died in childhood) was Dr. Waitstill Hastings, whose younger brother, Hopestill Hastings, of Hatfield, was father of our Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr.

Thus, as eldest son, Dr. Waitstill Hastings should have inherited the plate of the family arms, but his death, at the age of 34, doubtless left his mother, Mary Field Hastings, who for twenty years had lived a widow in Hatfield, still in possession of his father's effects, and at her death her eldest surviving son, Hopestill Hastings, became the owner of this plate. Through his eldest son, Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr., it passed into the possession of Dr. Seth Hastings, Jr., his eldest son, and its last owner by right of seniority.

It was kept for many years in a drawer of Dr. Hastings' secretary, and while the children were always permitted to play with it, thus becoming perfectly familiar with the design, they understood that it was never to be taken away from their father's desk.

Here it remained until about 1835-40, when, during my father's absence from Clinton, a brother of Dr. Seth Hastings, Jr., took this plate with the idea of using it as a means of establishing a claim to property in England. But in this he was prevented by press of business and the difficulties in the way of carrying out this plan, and the plate was lost.

Years afterward, when my father first saw the Huntingdon arms in "Burke's Peerage," he at once recognized it as the same device borne by the copper-plate, with which he had played when a child.

The loss of this plate is to be regretted, for "while in this country" (to quote from Mr. Wm. Appleton, of Boston,) "it adds nothing in any way to a family or to a man to have inherited the right to use a coat of arms, except so far as it may be an incentive to honor," still without it the true connection of the American Hastings with the English family will never be known, for there is doubt as to the accuracy of the statement made by Mrs. Buckminster, and given on page 8.

A solution might be found in the records of the family of Walter Hastings, of Kirby, England, sixth son of Francis, second Earl of Huntingdon. This Walter married Joyce Roper, and left, according to Lady Moira, who wrote in 1803, "numerous offspring."

INTRODUCTION.

FROM PROF. HERBERT BAXTER ADAMS' "HISTORY OF THE THOMAS ADAMS AND THOMAS HASTINGS FAMILIES, OF AMHERST, MASSACHUSETTS."

THE history of the Hastings family has been definitely traced through all its American branches and back through English stock to its parent Danish stem. Freeman, the English historian, says there are only five families in England that can really trace their lineage back of the time of Edward III (1327-1377), and the Hastings family is one of these. . . . Hastings is a name older than the Norman Conquest (1066), for the castle and seaport of Hastings were held by that family when William the Conqueror landed in England. The region of the battle of Hastings was in the possession of the family before the Normans had settled in Gaul (911), for as early as the time of Alfred (871-901), we hear of a Danish pirate by the name of Hasting who made himself formidable to the Saxons by occupying with his followers a portion of Sussex. Mrs. Buckminster adds to this the statement that they held it from the Crown for many generations."

The first of the family who was elevated to the peerage was Henry, Lord Hastings, son of William de Hastings, Steward of Henry II (1154-1189).

The Hastings coat of arms, containing a maunch (sleeve), shows that the office of steward was hereditary in the family. The Hastings became allied to the royal families of England and Scotland, and were allowed to wear the arms of those countries, and also of France, as one of the heirs of Plantagenet by marriage with the Princess Ida.

INTRODUCTION.

George, the third Lord Hastings, was created Earl of Huntingdon in 1529, and married the daughter of David, King of Scotland.

The family of Hastings has enjoyed nineteen peerages, but only two or three now exist, and for these scarcely an heir survives. The estates of the late Marquis of Hastings reverted to the Crown, for his line was wholly extinct. The family is Roman Catholic, and bears an implacable animosity toward Queen Victoria on account of some alleged ill-treatment.

We are indebted to Mrs. Buckminster for the following explanation of the connection between the English and the American families of Hastings:

Sir Henry and George Hastings, grandsons of the Earl of Huntingdon, had sons who became Puritans, and were obliged by persecution to leave their native land and find homes in the New World. As early as 1634 we find Thomas Hastings and wife had arrived on this shore; and in 1638 John and family had followed. That they were brothers was a tradition in the family; but it has not been clearly shown, and it is more probable that they were cousins, Thomas being descended from a younger brother of the Earl of Huntingdon. (From the Hastings Memorial, page 5.)

FAMILY OF
DEACON THOMAS HASTINGS,
WATERTOWN, MASS.

DEACON THOMAS HASTINGS,
OF WATERTOWN, MASS.

Thomas Hastings, aged 29, and his wife Susanna, aged 34, embarked at Ipswich, England, April 10, 1634, in the "Elizabeth," William Andrews, Master, for New England, and settled in Watertown, Mass, then known as the "Massachusetts Bay Colony." Here he was admitted freeman, May 6, 1635.

He "laid down" a lot in Dedham in 1635 or 1636, but never lived there.

He was Selectman of Watertown from 1638 to 1643, and again from 1650 to 1671; Town Clerk, 1671, 1677, 1680; Representative, 1673; and he long held the office of deacon.

His wife, Susanna, died childless, February 2, 1650, and he married, April 2, 1651, Margaret Cheney, daughter of William and Martha Cheney, of Roxbury, Mass. She was the mother of all his children.

He died in 1685, aged 80 years.

According to an inventory, dated September 9, 1685, his real estate amounted to £421. He owned two farms, and as many as fifteen other lots. He was grantee for seven lots, the remainder he purchased.

The west side of School Street, then called Hill Street, was always his residence. His homestead passed to his son Samuel.

In his will, dated March 12, 1682-83, proved September 7, 1685, he gave to his oldest son Thomas, who received a professional education, only £5, saying: "I have been at great expense to bring him up a scholar, and I have given him above three-score pounds to begin the world with." To his sons John, Joseph, Benjamin, Nathaniel, Samuel, and to his daughter, Hepzibah Bond, he gave each £40. To his granddaughter Margaret (eldest daughter of his son Thomas) he gave £5, and to her sister Hannah £3, and the remainder to his wife Margaret. He had eight children, Thomas, the eldest, being our ancestor.

1. THOMAS, born July 1, 1652; died July 23, 1712, aged 60 years.

2. JOHN, born March 4, 1654; died March 28, 1718, aged 64 years.

3. WILLIAM, born August 8, 1655; drowned August, 1669, aged 14.

4. JOSEPH, born September 11, 1657; died October 7, 1695, aged 38 years.

5. BENJAMIN, born August 9, 1659; died December 18, 1711, aged 52 years.

6. NATHANIEL, born September 25, 1661; died December 18, 1694.

7. HEPZIBAH, born January 31, 1663. Married June 2, 1680, Deacon William Bond, of Watertown. They had twelve children.

8. SAMUEL, born March 12, 1665, died July 24, 1723, aged 58 years.

Her family and descendants have been more fully traced out than have those of any other branch of the Hastings family by Mrs. Buckminster, of Framingham, more than a third part of whose valuable work, "The Hastings Memorial" (published in 1866 by Samuel G. Drake, of Boston), is devoted to Samuel Hastings' family.

No. 1.

Dr. Thomas Hastings, born in Watertown, Mass., July 1, 1652. Died in Hatfield, July 23, 1712. He married first, October 10, 1672, Anna Hawks, daughter of John Hawks, of Hadley. She was the mother of six children, and died October 25, 1705.

He married second, February 14, 1706, Mary Burt, daughter of David Burt, of Northampton. She died April 13, 1734.

Dr. Hastings was admitted freeman at Hatfield, February 8, 1678. He was the only physician for Northampton, Hadley, Hatfield, Deerfield, and all the country around.

He was also the first school teacher Hatfield ever had. According to Temple's History of Whately, page 20, "It was not uncommon to unite the professions of physician and teacher in the same person, and, as the grandmothers were mainly relied upon for prescriptions and poultices, he (Dr. Hastings) seems to have found sufficient time for the discharge of duty in the double capacity." It is a remarkable fact, in regard to this school taught by Dr. Hastings, that girls were admitted from the outset and pursued the same studies as the boys, remarkable because such liberality was unknown elsewhere in New England until after the Revolution. In Boston girls were not admitted to the public schools until 1789 (see Boston School Report, 1866, page 28); in Northampton not until 1802 (see Judd's History of Hadley, page 65). In view of these facts, there seems to be a certain historic fitness that a Hatfield woman should found the first woman's college in New England (Smith College, at Northampton).

Dr. Hastings' son, Dr. Thomas Hastings second, also taught school in Hatfield. Eight of Dr. Hastings' nine children survived him. Of the three youngest by his second wife, Silence, born February 26, 1707, alone lived to maturity, Thankful and Sylvanus having died in infancy. Silence Hastings married Josiah Hadlock.

For convenience, the four daughters of Dr. Thomas and Anna Hawks Hastings are first named, leaving the two sons to come last in our record.

9. MARGARET, born July 6, 1674. Married May 7, 1707, Nathaniel Evetts, of Guilford, Conn.

10. HANNAH, born January 19, 1677. Married Samuel Gillett.

11. HEPHZIBAH, born April 6, 1682. Married April 5, 1705, Jonathan Curtis, of Wethersfield, Conn.

12. MEHITABLE, born June 23, 1684. Married, November 25, 1714, John Burke.

13. JOHN, youngest child of Dr. Thomas, Sr., born in Hatfield, September 17, 1689. Married first Lydia ——; married second, 1720, Hannah, daughter of Deacon John White, of Hatfield. He lived for several years in Hatfield; was at Fort Dummer, Vt., in 1735.

After this date he "moved up" Connecticut River. He had nine children, perhaps more. Three of his sons settled in Charlestown, N. H.

No. 14.

14. DR. THOMAS HASTINGS, JR., third child and eldest son of Dr. Thomas and Anna Hawks Hastings; born September 24, 1679; died April 14, 1728.

He married, March 6, 1701, Mary Field, daughter of John and Mary Field, of Hatfield. She was born February 20, 1680; died November 9, 1764, aged 84 years.

His two eldest sons bore each the name of Thomas, but both died in infancy.

A third son was called Waitstill, and became a physician, like his father, and handed down the family title to his grandson, Dr. John Hastings, of Hatfield.

Dr. Thomas Hastings, Jr., was much sought after for his professional services, and he was often called to attend patients in Boston. On one of these visits to Boston he was suddenly taken ill, and, as tradition says, thought he was the victim of slow poison. He lived to reach home, told his wife of his impression, and that he should soon die, as he did, April 14, 1728, in his 48th year. "A quaint, unpoetical, but flattering eulogy, and an acrostic to his memory," were written at the time of his death by Josephus Nash. (See Appendix for a copy of these verses.) For a very interesting surgical case treated by Dr. Hastings, see Appendix No. 3, of Rev. John Williams' "History of his Captivity and Deliverance."

Dr. Thomas Hastings, second, had twelve children:

15. MARY, born December 24, 1701; died January 10, 1702.
16. THOMAS, born November 6, 1702; died November 4, 1703.
17. MARY, born July 26, 1704; married Benjamin Billings.
18. ANNA, born October 13, 1706; married — White.
19. DOROTHY, born July 27, 1709; died July 29, 1711.
20. THOMAS, born May 5, and died 1713.
21. WAITSTILL, born June 3, 1714; died April 22, 1748.

(See below.)

22. TABITHA, born October 6, 1715; married January 4, 1739, John Strickland.
23. HOPESTILL, born April 13, 1718. (See below.)
24. DOROTHY, born March 20; died April 6, 1720.
25. LUCY, twelfth child of Dr. Thomas and Mary Field Hastings, born February 1, 1723; married Jonathan Taylor, and lived in Heath, Massachusetts.

No. 26.

26. LIEUTENANT THOMAS HASTINGS, eleventh child of Dr. Thomas and Mary Field Hastings, born January 28, 1721. Married, 1742, Mary Belden, daughter of Joseph Belden, of Hatfield. She was born 1723. They removed to Amherst, Massachusetts, about 1753. He was a farmer and a lieutenant in the militia. He died January 22, 1787, aged 66. His widow died July 31, 1801, aged 79. They had thirteen children, and this is the branch of the Hastings family which his great-great-grandson, Prof. Herbert Baxter Adams, of Johns Hopkins University, has traced out in connection with his Adams ancestry. (See pamphlet privately printed by Herbert B. Adams, Amherst, 1880.) Professor Adams says of Lieutenant Thomas Hastings: "He was the fourth in descent from the first settler bearing his name. He was the youngest son of Dr. Thomas Hastings, Jr., and the third of that name in a single family." Indeed, the name of Thomas is several times repeated among the descendants of Lieutenant Thomas Hastings.

No. 21.

Dr. Waitstill Hastings, born June 3, 1714. Married, 1737, Abigail Marsh, of Hatfield. He died April 22, 1748, aged 34.

"He settled in Hatfield; and the town, since its settlement, has never been without a Dr. Hastings of that family, excepting the few years that intervened between his decease and the taking of the degree of his grandson, Dr. John Hastings, of Hatfield. Dr. Waitstill left five children—three daughters—Abigail, who married Solomon Wolcott, and removed to Utica, N. Y.; Hannah, who married Nathaniel Kellogg, and lived in Dalton, Mass.; and Mary, who died at Colchester, Conn., aged 22. A son, Samuel, also died young; and his oldest child, John, born January 10, 1738, married, in 1764, Content, daughter of Rev. Ephraim Little, of Colchester, Conn. She died in 1829, aged 89.

"He was a magistrate of Hatfield for thirty-six years; a senator or councilor of Massachusetts twenty-eight years, and died December 6, 1811. Seven of his ten children lived to be more than eighty years of age. Two of his sons, the eldest John, and Waitstill, became physicians, John settling in Hatfield, and Dr. Waitstill removing to Margaretta, Ohio. He had several children."

No. 23.

Hopestill Hastings, ninth child of Dr. Thomas, Jr., and Mary Field Hastings, born at Hatfield, April 13, 1718. He married, in 1741, Lydia Frary.

He was a farmer of Hatfield, and died December 24, 1766, in the 48th year of his age. He had ten children, four of whom died in childhood. Two, Tabitha and Elihu, died unmarried. Elihu Hastings was a Revolutionary pensioner, a farmer, and lived with his brother, Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr. After Dr. Hastings death, he removed to the home of his nephew, Dr. Seth Hastings, Jr., where he died February 25, 1837, aged 85 years.

FAMILY COVENANT.

CLINTON, N. Y., August 16, 1827.

In view of the past goodness of God to me and my family, and in the firm belief that a covenant-keeping God will abundantly bless those families that call on His name, I would recommend to my children to set apart some portion of the first Sabbath evening of every month, between the hours of eight and eleven o'clock, for a season of special prayer to the Father of mercies for the influences of His blessed spirit on me and on themselves, their children and their children's children to the remotest generations, including those connected with them by marriage; and that each head of a family shall keep it ever in charge, not only to observe this season in his own family, but also so enjoin it on his descendants, that so the fear of the Lord may remain with them and theirs forever.

(Signed) SETH HASTINGS, SR.

We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, fully according with the views of our father, do hereby agree, so far as the Providence of God shall enable us, religiously to observe the foregoing recommendations.

No. 29.

Seth Hastings, son of Hopestill and Lydia Frary Hastings, was born at Hatfield, Mass., December 6, 1745.

He studied medicine and settled in Washington, Conn. Here he married, November 10, 1779, Eunice Parmele, eldest daughter of Captain Thomas Parmele, and here eight of their family of eleven children were born, the three youngest being born after the removal of the family to Clinton, Oneida County, N. Y.

Eunice Parmele was born December 30, 1763, and died in Clinton, May 2, 1821. She was married before she had reached her sixteenth birthday, while her husband was almost thirty-four years old.

Her portrait, painted by John Brewster in 1816, shows her to have been a fair, blue-eyed woman with delicate features, and a sweet and peaceful expression. She is said to have been "a woman of uncommon ability and of sterling piety, and although overwhelmed with domestic cares, she was remarkably attentive to the moral and religious education of her children." Many years after her death, one of her sons wrote thus of her: "My mother was the home angel, always kind, considerate, loving, and helpful."

In the Winter of 1797, Dr. Hastings left his comfortable home in Washington, and, with a company of neighbors, removed his family to the then almost unbroken wilderness of Oneida County, N. Y.

The journey was slowly made upon sleighs and ox-sleds, and they arrived in Clinton in February. This beautiful village had, at that time, few comforts to offer to the newcomers. "Cultivated fields were but partially cleared of logs and trees, while the neighboring houses were hidden by the denser forests. The district school was a sort of lumber-box; the unfinished meeting-house like an open barn. The people were of every sort of religious belief, and the Indian still lingered in the neighborhood."

For a physician, these first years in the new "Western Country" were full of hard work, the almost impassable roads making it necessary for him to ride long distances on horseback when making his professional visits. His records of cases treated, and the fragments of other writings still preserved, reveal a man of superior education and intelligence, and he was often called in consultation to neighboring towns.

Dr. Hastings settled upon a farm about two miles south of the village of Clinton upon the Paris Hill road. Here he resided for thirty-three years, until his death, April 29, 1830, at the age of 85 years.

In his personal appearance he was notable for his reserved and somewhat stern manner. He was a tall, spare, and dignified man, but having withal an exceedingly kind heart and a vein of humor. He is remembered by his grandchildren as an old man pacing back and forth through his house during inclement weather, meanwhile counting his steps until he had reached a certain number of miles, which he thought sufficient exercise. They also remembered that they never claimed his attention, nor did he notice them. He must have been fond of music, for all his children were early taught to sing, and the memory of the family gatherings at Thanksgiving time, the one great holiday of the year, was one cherished by his sons and daughters. There are many stories of the fun and frolics which these children enjoyed in their home life, and this leads us to believe that they did not stand in fear of their father even though he appeared severe.

Dr. Hastings and his gentle, patient wife trained their children to fill useful positions in life. The two daughters married physicians, and the eldest son also became a physician. One became eminent as a professor of music; one was a banker; one was a publisher and bookseller; one was a merchant, and two were lawyers.

Four of these children, three sons and a daughter who died in infancy, were albinos, a singularity which had never before been known in either the father's or the mother's family, and one which has never appeared in any of their descendants.

DR. SETH HASTINGS, JUNIOR,
CLINTON, N. Y.

No. 38.

Dr. Seth Hastings, Jr., eldest son of Dr. Seth and Eunice Parmele Hastings, born at Washington, Litchfield County, Conn., August 23, 1780. Died in Clinton, Oneida County, N. Y., March 26, 1861, aged 81 years.

When he was seventeen years old he removed with his parents to Clinton, and having completed his academic and professional studies, he was taken into partnership with his father in the year 1801. For nearly fifty years he was the leading physician of the place, and he was often called to adjoining towns.

He was, from the first, one of the leading minds in the community, and did much to determine and mold its character. He was the friend of temperance and order, morality, education, and religion. He was eminently a peacemaker. He was interested in all good public enterprises, and helped them forward according to his ability.

His religious character was marked. Humble, prayerful, earnest, his piety showed itself in his household, in the prayer-meeting, amid his professional pursuits, and in all the relations of life. He was leader of the choir in the Old White Meeting House for several years, and until laid aside in 1851, by illness, he usually conducted the singing of the church on Communion Sabbaths and at all social meetings.

Possessed of good native endowments, he cultivated them by life-long reading and observation. His was a social nature. Amiable, cheerful, hopeful, with a smile and a kind word for everybody, he diffused happiness all around him. He loved to find the sunny side of life, and he did much to make it sunny. This trait of character helped to make him an agreeable and successful physician.

About the year 1808 he built the red brick house, which has been known for ninety years as the "Hastings Homestead." It was sold shortly after the death of Dr. Hastings, and within the past year it has been repaired, though its original plan has been preserved as far as possible, and it is now used as a bank. A recent paper read before the Rural Art Society, of Clinton, mentions the doorway and parlor mantlepiece of this house as being good examples of colonial art.

This was a home of generous hospitality. For many years it was seldom without its guests from all parts of the country. Dr. Hastings was particularly fond of social gatherings in which music formed a leading part of the entertainment. On Thanksgiving evenings, for many successive years his parlors were filled with family friends, old and young, of a musical turn, and the walls echoed with joyful singing. The tunes selected were old and new, long and short, half-forgotten and familiar; those with a decidedly ancient odor having the preference. On such occasions Dr. Hastings seemed to be in his true element. It has been said that one "could seldom pass the old brick mansion without hearing either vocal or instrumental music, or both."

His love of horticulture made his garden and orchard remarkable for that time. In that part known as the "Botanical Garden" was to be found nearly every native plant, and many others sent by correspondents from distant sections of the country. He was constantly adding new varieties of fruit to his collection, and by careful selection of the more hardy kinds he secured a bountiful supply of fine fruit the entire year. See Appendix.

John Clark Hastings, eldest child of Dr. Seth and Huldah Clark Hastings, born in Clinton, June 10, 1803; died in Ithaca, N. Y., August 25, 1880.

Married, August 17, 1829, Patty Ann Parker, daughter of Jason Parker, of Utica, N. Y. She was born in 1804, and died in Clinton, November 28, 1876.

Mr. Hastings was for some years a very successful merchant in Utica, but his whole fortune was swept away in the panic of 1837. The following year he removed to Clinton, where the remainder of his life was passed. He engaged in the nursery business, which he followed for many years. He will be best remembered as a most artistic landscape gardener. He was past middle life when he first devoted himself to this pursuit, for which he had a remarkable talent. His chief principle was to follow, in the treatment of a place, the hints given by nature, and there are many beautiful examples of his art in various cities through the State of New York as well as in other places.

As notable among his works may be mentioned the new cemetery and the campus of Hamilton College, the beautiful grounds of Prof. Root and of Dr. A. D. Gridley, and his own garden, all in Clinton. He did much to encourage the making of beautiful homes by founding, with Prof. Root, his life-long friend, the "Rural Art Society," of Clinton, an association composed of the leading citizens, and still, as for very many years, an active force in the community. However, his crowning life-work was left unfinished, and as he had not drawn the plan completely, it was found to be impossible to entirely follow out his design. He was engaged, without restriction as to expense, to lay out the Fisk-McGraw grounds (now owned by Cornell University) at Ithaca. Enough had been done to prove that this would have been his masterpiece, when a sudden cold developed pneumonia, and he died after only a few hours' illness.

Kind hearted and generous, he possessed the artistic temperament in large degree. He grew up at a time when, in meeting an older person of any social standing, a well-behaved child was expected to stand aside and doff his cap, and his fine manners of the old-school resulted from this early training.

FAMILY OF
HON. GEORGE HASTINGS,
MT. MORRIS, N. Y.

No. 51.

George Hastings, son of Dr. Seth and Huldah Clark Hastings, born at Clinton, March 13, 1807; died at Mt. Morris, Livingston County, N. Y., August 29, 1866.

He married, first, Mary Seymour, daughter of Norman Seymour. She was born at Herkimer, N. Y., July 31, 1808. She died in Mt. Morris, February 25, 1845, in her 37th year, leaving five children.

He married, second, May 25, 1847, Chloe Arzelia Parmele, daughter of Asa Harmon and Emily (Cole) Parmele. She was born August 25, 1813; died at Mt. Morris, February 21, 1891, in the 78th year of her age. She was the mother of four children.

Mr. Hastings graduated at Hamilton College in the class of 1826, and studied law with his uncle, Thomas Emmons Clark, in Utica. He settled in Mt. Morris, N. Y., in 1830. "He was not, in any sense, a politician, but it can truthfully be said that no man has lived in that community who commanded the confidence of his fellow-citizens to a greater degree." He was elected, successively, Supervisor (1851), District Attorney (serving in that capacity for eight years), member of Congress (1852-1854), and County Judge (1855-1863). He was honored with numerous other positions of trust, and was well known throughout western New York, and as widely esteemed for his integrity of character and useful life.

With his large interest in public affairs, and the claims of an unusually extensive practice in his profession, he was always deeply interested in religious work, and he was constant in his attendance at church and Sunday-school, and the prayer-meeting. He also observed the good Puritan custom of beginning each day by first seeking Divine help and blessing at the family altar. One of the precious memories to his children must always be these morning prayers during the last few months of his life, when the whole family met in his sick room. Though wasted by a torturing disease, his calm courage and serene faith made it a place of peace, and no voice was so joyful as his in the songs of praise or so confident in asking strength for the duties of the day.

For nearly fifty years his beautiful home, Oak Grove, has been noted for its hospitality, and the family connection and acquaintance being large, each Summer-season brought numerous guests, who always met a cordial welcome, and who bore away delightful memories of the time spent in this charming homestead.

The following tribute to the memory of Mrs. Chloe Parmele Hastings appeared in the New York Observer, at the time of her death, and it is so truly descriptive of her character that it is here given :

"Thus ended the long life of a woman of rare endowments, marked spiritual power, and wide influence. The element of self-sacrifice entered into her life and character to a wonderful degree. She was, therefore, a woman of heroic impulses and large sympathies. Hers was no narrow world, bounded on all sides by limitations. She never recognized failure as a probability, and was always able to see in mysterious Providences a wise fatherhood, controlling and directing all things in orderly ways. So it was that what men ordinarily account as defeat and disaster, was to her a part of a Divine scheme, reaching from and connecting the finite to the Infinite.

"With all her strength of character, she was conspicuous for her gentleness. Her loving arms were always extended to those who had tasted the bitterness of great sorrow. Literally, she wept and sorrowed with them, and all who knew the wealth of her great soul were assured of its bountiful sympathy and kinship in all emergencies.

"She was a woman of thorough culture, at home in the world of books and deeply versed in the knowledge of the Scriptures. Added to a keen intellectual grasp of the teachings of the Word was that large spiritual vision which gave her rare insight into both the mind and heart of Christ. She impressed her remarkable gifts, her wonderful consecration, her abounding love, her grand sympathy, upon the consciousness and into the fiber of all who knew her. How large a circle of friends she bore in constant and loving remembrance! In her private diary she carefully noted the birthdays and anniversaries of scores of those she loved, and on each recurring occasion of joy or sorrow a sweet note of congratulation or of sympathy was usually sent.

"Strangely enough, she who so loved the beauties of nature, and so noted the changes of season and foliage, was denied the use of her eyes during her latter years. As sight faded she accepted the loss as a part of the discipline of her life. Not a murmur escaped her lips, nor did she allow the affliction to mar the spirits of her most intimate friends. She learned to associate the faces of friends with their voices, and in the deprivation of sight she had recourse to imagination.

"Even the baby grandchildren found pleasure in her sheltering love and tender sympathy. She wrought for the Master till he came. Blind and feeble as she was during the last year she still taught a Bible class of women, and diffused an influence for good among all whom she met. Her character was a marvelous compound of gentleness and strength, of rare spiritual development and keen intellectual force. A grand woman, she still lives in the memory of those who knew and loved her."

George Starr Hastings, born May 1, 1866. Married, April 4, 1891, Adele Flagler, of Morristown, N. J. A son, George Starr, Jr., was born December 28, 1893.

The following account of Col. Hastings' war record is taken from a "History of the Class of 1857, of Hamilton College:"

"On August 19, 1862, he obtained from the Governor of New York authority to recruit a company for the Twenty-fourth New York Independent Battery of Light Artillery, then in the field. He very quickly secured the enlistment of over eighty men for that battery, among whom were many college men.

"The country was never more patriotic, and yielded the flower of her youth at that time for the sacred cause of Liberty and Union. It was hard to leave wife and home, and in doing so he was actuated by a controlling sense of duty. He was in active service until January, 1865, first with the rank of First Lieutenant, and finally receiving a commission as Brevet-Colonel. For over a year he served as Judge-Advocate of the sub-District of the Albemarle, in North Carolina, and participated in several battles.

"On April 20, 1864, while on duty at Plymouth, N. C., with a small brigade, numbering about two thousand men, he was captured after a series of engagements, commencing on April 17, and resulting finally, after repeated repulses of the enemy, in a grand charge over our earthworks and defenses, and the capture of the entire garrison after several hours' fighting within the defenses. He was held as prisoner of war for nearly six months. At this period of the war exchanges of prisoners had ceased. He made four attempts to escape; the first was by means of a tunnel constructed with infinite labor during the night time, the only implements being a pair of hands, a broken gate-hinge and a jack-knife. The period of construction was six weeks, length of tunnel forty feet, ventilation imperfect, caliber just sufficient for one person who had subsisted on Confederate diet for six months.

"The second scheme resulted in the escape of all engaged in it, with the exception of Colonel Hastings. The third attempt was successful in a limited and disappointing sense; he traveled for four nights through the heart of Georgia, and was finally held up by one John Jackson, a Georgia planter, aided by three hounds and one black man. His possession of a map of the country was regarded as positive proof of his being a spy. He was sent in irons to the city of Savannah, held for a few hours in the cell of a jail, but was finally restored to the so-called rights of a prisoner of war.

"On October 11, 1864, with four New York officers, he succeeded in running the guard-line of a military prison camp in Columbia, S. C. After thirty-four days of adventure, with constant vigils and many narrow escapes from capture, the entire party reached the Union lines at an outpost near Knoxville, Tenn.

As he was making preparations to return to the field he received a telegram from Governor Fenton, which resulted in his appointment, first, as military secretary of the Governor of New York, and shortly afterward as private secretary.

He resided in the city of Albany from January, 1865, to September, 1868, at which time he resigned and removed to the city of New York, resuming the practice of his profession. He now resides in Morristown, N. J., having offices at No. 265 Broadway, New York. He is the senior member of the law firm of Hastings & Gleason.

FAMILY OF
REV. SETH PARSONS MERWIN HASTINGS,
ACCORD, N. Y.

No. 55.

Seth Parsons Merwin, son of Dr. Seth and Huldah Clark Hastings, born at Clinton, April 20, 1813. Graduated at Hamilton College, 1833, and at Auburn Theological Seminary, 1836. Ordained February, 1838. Married October 1, 1838, Elizabeth B. Buttrick, of Clinton. She was born October 11, 1814. She died April 19, 1876.

He preached in Vernon Center, 1839; Moravia, 1843-45; Summer Hill, 1846; Pompey Hill, Chittenango, Coxsackie, and at Accord, Ulster Co., N. Y., where he died February 24, 1876.

Professor Edward North, of Hamilton College, said of him: "Mr. Hastings belonged to a family of good and true men — men of the choicest New England stock — men who believed in the blessedness of large families; whose children were as arrows in the hand of a mighty man, and whose happiness was in proportion as they had the quiver full of them. His father was one of seven brave brothers from Connecticut, of whom Gerrit Smith once said, 'three of them were albinos and all of them were honest.' One of them composed Sabbath hymns that have done more to prepare sinners for heaven than a dozen most eloquent preachers.

"The most striking qualities of Rev. Seth P. M. Hastings were modesty, common sense, cheerfulness, fidelity. He was always content, wherever the Lord of the harvest gave him work to do. And he did his work with joyous confidence in the fruitfulness of the truth faithfully preached. He never sought the chief seat, but once placed there, he filled it with dignity and tact. He was remarkably large hearted, wide-minded, free from cant and censoriousness, with a habit of seeing the best side of men and things. His perceptions were clear, his tastes refined, his judgment trustworthy. His fixed aversion from attempting brilliant things saved him from saying or doing foolish things."

It was also said of him: "His life was beautiful in all the elements of manhood, friendship, and piety, and his ministry was dignified, fervent, and full of the gospel."

FAMILY OF
FRANCIS HENRY HASTINGS,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

No. 56.

Francis Henry Hastings, son of Dr. Seth and Hulda Clark Hastings, born in Clinton, November 23, 1814; died in Rochester, N. Y., February 18, 1895.

He married, October 10, 1848, Amelia H. Gott, daughter of Hon. Daniel Gott, of Pompey Hill, N. Y. She was born August 27, 1825, and was descended from Charles Gott, who came with Gov. Endicott to Salem, Mass., in 1628. One of her maternal ancestors was William Leete, first Governor of Connecticut, by whose protection the lives of the regicides, Whalley and Goff, were saved, they being for some weeks hidden in the cellar of his house at Guilford, Conn.

Francis H. Hastings received his education at the Clinton Academy and became a civil engineer. The years which he spent in Northern and Central New York in surveying routes for railroads and canals, were full of congenial work and companionships, and his health was greatly benefited by the out-door life. All public improvements were stopped by the panic of 1837, and in 1842 he removed to Chicago, where the next ten years of his life were passed.

He was a nurseryman, and through all his subsequent life he retained pleasant memories of these years. He was an active member of the Second Presbyterian Church and was much attached to both pastor and people.

In 1852 he removed to Rochester, and settled upon the fruit farm, three miles east of the city, where the remainder of his life was spent. Though in very poor health when he first came to Rochester, he at once began, with characteristic energy, to transform the commonplace farm-house, with its barren surroundings, into the beautiful home, with its vines and flowers and fine shade trees, which it grew to be under his skillful hand. Here for more than forty years he enjoyed his garden, his books, and his friends, for he was an eminently hospitable man, keeping a warm welcome, particularly for those connected by family ties. Indeed, this very record attests his love of kindred, kept for sixty years of his laborious, active life, the later entries made when both sight and strength were failing.

In these days of art schools his singular gifts of caricature would have made him a successful illustrator, but in his youth there was small encouragement for an artist, and so he never cultivated his taste for art. Whenever he was interrupted in reading, or while conversing with friends, his pencil would begin its work upon any convenient scrap or the margin of his newspaper, and face after face, curious and fantastic, but full of life and expression, would grow under his hand. The older members of his father's family used to tell of the huge wood pile in the Clinton home. It was the duty of the many boys of the household to saw the fire-wood, and he not only did his share of the work, but also decorated the end of every stick with a portrait.

His was an eminently sincere and affectionate nature. His sound judgment and integrity made him a safe counsellor, and his chief characteristic was a marvelous purity of heart, while his daily life was the expression of his simple, child-like Christian faith. His home was a place of contentment, where the cares of life were not permitted to enter. After the work of the day was over, it was his delight to spend an hour with his music, and the very spirit of peace seemed to breathe from the flute upon which he played for more than half a century. The later evening was devoted to reading, for until the very last he was an indefatigable reader, especially of history.

It was only a few months before his death, when impaired sight forbade any continued effort, that he listened with keenest pleasure to the whole of Parkman's works. He was truly patriotic and kept himself well informed upon all questions of public welfare.

His was a quiet life, nearly devoid of incident, but it was filled with unselfish devotion to his loved ones, with kind deeds for others, and it was truly a blessing to all who came within its influence.

FAMILY OF
DR. PANET MARSHALL HASTINGS,
HARTFORD, CONN.

No. 57.

Panet Marshall Hastings, son of Dr. Seth and Huldah Clark Hastings, born in Clinton, N. Y., August 17, 1816; died in New Rochelle, N. Y., June 4, 1898.

He graduated at Hamilton College in the class of 1838, and attended medical lectures in Fairfield, New York, and New Haven. For several years he practiced medicine with his father in Clinton, giving also several courses of lectures upon anatomy and physiology in Hamilton College.

In 1854 he removed to Hartford, Conn., where he became a member of the Connecticut Medical Society, and of the Hartford County Medical Society. He was long and prominently connected with the Hartford Hospital and with the Old People's Home, and he devoted much of his time to these institutions.

Personally, Dr. Hastings was a man of fine presence and most courteous manners. One instantly recognized in him a true gentleman, but only his intimate friends could know his kindness of heart and his deep sympathy. He was a man of wide culture, and his spare hours were given to the best books. He had remarkable mechanical skill, which was not only useful in his profession, but also afforded him recreation; and the fishing-rods which he made were marvels of beautiful workmanship and finish.

He was the last survivor of the eight brothers, and though his last visit to Rochester and to his sisters in Cincinnati was saddened by the loss of many dear to him, yet he was cheerful and patient, bearing the weight of years with courage, never demanding attention, but watchful of opportunities to help others.

He married, June 22, 1843, Jane, daughter of Charles and Alicia Lawrence Sheldon, of Hartford. She was born June 25, 1816; died in Hartford, September 12, 1889.

He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., February 24, 1842, and is the son of Job John Habberton, of Burnham Market, England, who came to America when a young man and married Esther Eliza Peck, of Brooklyn.

John Habberton enlisted in May, 1862, in the Thirteenth New York Militia Regiment, for three months. At the expiration of his term of service he re-enlisted in the First New York Mounted Rifles, in which he was a brother sergeant of Charles H. Hastings (son of Charles Hastings, of Troy, Michigan), and also of Frederick Guernsey Hastings (son of Parsons C. Hastings, of Brooklyn). In January, 1864, Mr. Habberton was appointed lieutenant in the Twentieth U. S. Colored Infantry, and he was mustered out in September, 1865. He was "never wounded, and, although in several battles, never killed a rebel."

From 1865 to 1872 he was connected with the publishing house of Harper Brothers. For several years he was literary editor of the Christian Union, and for many years he was a member of the staff of the New York Herald.

Besides editing the writings of the English essayists of the Seventeenth Century, he has written several books and many short stories and magazine articles, which have been widely read.

No. 58.

Mary Alida, daughter of Dr. Seth and Huldah Clark Hastings, born March 11, 1818; married, September 9, 1840, James Whitelaw Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y. He was born February 20, 1816; died April 6, 1893, at Cincinnati, Ohio. He was for some years a merchant in Rochester, but in 1847 he removed to Cincinnati and engaged in the commission business. He was for some time President of the Chamber of Commerce, and he had a wide reputation for his kindness in business relations, and many were helped through his generosity. It is said of him that "no one ever came in contact with him without feeling the force of his magnetic personality. He was a man of widest culture and unusual grace of manner." He was remarkable as a raconteur, and his ready wit never failed to find an anecdote to fit every occasion, and no one could excel him in vivid portrayal of character, nor could one resist the pathos with which he related some story of trouble or sorrow which had touched his sympathetic heart. For many years he was a great traveler, and with his wife made many journeys to Europe, and they also visited the Hawaiian Islands and many places of interest in our own country. Their beautiful home was boundless in its hospitality, and nearly every one, of an unusually large number of nieces and nephews, hold pleasant memories of long visits made there, while his kindness of heart endeared him to every one.

In 1890 Mr. and Mrs. Sibley celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage in their beautiful home, on the Grandin Road, Cincinnati, and children, grandchildren, and many relatives gathered to offer congratulations. The following poem was sent by a niece, Mrs. Sophie Wells Averill, of Los Angeles, Cal.:

FIFTY YEARS.

Fifty years! ah, few so blest
To walk thus side by side
And prove how strong and true the love
The bridegroom and the bride
Gave one another as they stood
Before the entrance-way
Of their new life, while far beyond
A shadowy future lay.

What tender joys, what bitter griefs,
What mingled smiles and tears,
Make up the story of two lives
United fifty years!
A strangely woven warp and woof
Inwrought of hopes and fears,
Of trials and plans and purpose high
This web of fifty years!

But human love, that trait alone
Which man in man reveres,
Has stronger, brighter, clearer shone
Through all these fifty years.
O'er all your mutual joys, its beams
Have softer radiance shed,
And strong up-borne your human hearts
When both those hearts have bled!

Then join your faithful hands again!
Your time-tried vows repeat!
While loving children, kindred, friends,
Your golden nuptials greet!
And may your last days be your best;
May peace your lives enfold,
Till love shall change your silver crowns
For those of living gold!

He graduated at Hamilton College in the class of 1842, and from Union Theological Seminary in May, 1846. The following October he was ordained to the work of a foreign missionary, and in November, 1846, he sailed for Ceylon. After teaching for five years in Batticotta Seminary he returned to America. He married, March 9, 1853, Anna, daughter of Rev. Richard F. Cleveland, of Clinton, and sister of Ex-President Grover Cleveland. They sailed for Ceylon, June 1, 1853. They returned to America in 1869, and remained for two years. Again they went to their work in Ceylon, and spent ten years, visiting this country in 1881. In 1882 they once more returned to India, and after the death of her husband Mrs. Hastings came home and settled near her son in Hartford, Conn.

"For forty-three years Dr. Hastings was a laborious and successful missionary of the American Board in the Island of Ceylon. He was connected with the Batticotta Seminary for seven or eight years, the latter part of the time as its principal. Jaffna College was established in 1871, as the outgrowth of Christian schools, to satisfy the pressing demand for higher education in Ceylon, and it fell to Dr. Hastings, as its first president, to organize a course of advanced studies in science, languages, and literature; and the work was wisely accomplished.

"In the history of evangelized Ceylon, Dr. Hastings will be always honored as an impressive preacher, with social gifts that commended his pulpit utterances; as a competent, earnest, patient, unselfish teacher who won the hearts of his pupils; as a thoughtful, far-seeing organizer, who laid right foundations broadly and deeply; as an attractive example of what is best in religious and scholarly culture."

FAMILY OF
EDWARD AUGUSTUS HASTINGS,
CLINTON, N. Y.

No. 63.

Edward Augustus Hastings, youngest son of Dr. Seth and Huldah Clark Hastings, born May 25, 1828; died in Clinton, February 25, 1892. Married, October 1, 1856, Martha Earle, of New York. For many years he was a merchant in New York, removing to Clinton in the Fall of 1880. Here he occupied the house made vacant by the death of his brother, John C. Hastings.

His loving, generous, unselfish nature made him a general favorite throughout the whole family connection, and there was never a child among all the nieces and nephews who did not claim him for their very own. Indeed, whenever "Uncle Ned" was within reach, they were always sure of help and sympathy in every project in which they were interested. His love for animals and for pets of all descriptions was a marked characteristic, and his true kindness of heart made him gentle and winning to even the least and most unworthy of his fellow men. His beautiful dark eyes, which danced with mirth, would easily fill with tears of sympathy when he was moved by the misfortunes of others. He was a rare man, and even during his last most painful illness his life-long thoughtfulness for others, and his gratitude for the smallest service, were noticeable traits. As his pastor said at his funeral, "There was but one voice through the entire village of loving appreciation of his character, and a sense of personal loss in his death." They had three children:

229. GERTRUDE EARLE HASTINGS, born in New York, July 29, 1857.

230. CLINTON AUGUSTUS HASTINGS, born May 23, 1864.

FAMILY OF
BETSEY HASTINGS JUDD.

No. 39.

Betsey Hastings, daughter of Dr. Seth and Eunice Parmele Hastings, born at Washington, Conn., August 28, 1782; died in Honolulu, Hawaii, May 14, 1876. Married, April 13, 1802, Dr. Elnathan Judd. He was born December 3, 1773. He practiced for many years in Paris Hill, Oneida County, N. Y., but his health having failed, they removed to Clinton. In 1837 they removed to Troy, Mich., and settled on a farm, where Dr. Judd died, September 4, 1845. In 1852 Mrs. Judd, with her daughter Harriet, sailed for the Sandwich Islands, where her son, Gerrit P. Judd, had resided for twenty-five years. The voyage around Cape Horn was a long one for a woman of seventy years, but letters written to home friends prove her to have been an observant traveler, and for twenty-three years she lived a most peaceful life in her son's beautiful home, surrounded by children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. It is said of her that "she was a woman of rare good sense, cheerful in disposition, and of an affectionate nature." She had enjoyed good health all her days, and even when the end came at the great age of ninety-four years, she had no disease, and enjoyed the full possession of all her faculties.

No. 236.

Dr. Gerrit Parmele Judd, eldest son of Dr. Elnathan and Betsey Hastings Judd, graduated at Hamilton College, and studied medicine, practicing for two or three years at Paris Hill. He married Laura Fish, a teacher in the Clinton Female Seminary, and they sailed, on October 15, 1827, as missionaries to the Hawaiian Islands. After some years' residence in the islands, Dr. Judd was called into the service of the Government, and filled with credit both the position of Secretary of State and Minister of Finance. At the urgent request of the king, Dr. Judd accepted the appointment of minister plenipotentiary to the respective governments of the United States, of France, and of England. He was accompanied by the two princes of the royal family, and was cordially received by the different governments to which he was accredited. Before his return to the islands he revisited his old home, and the many friends and relatives residing in Clinton, and then he spent some time with his more immediate family, who had several years before removed to Troy, Mich. While there he made arrangements for his mother and sister Harriet to make their home with him in Honolulu, and this plan was carried out the following year. In a book, "Sketches of Life: Social, Political, and Religious, in Hawaii," written by Mrs. Laura Fish Judd, and published in 1880, a most interesting account is given of Dr. Judd's work in the islands. (See, also, Appendix VI.)

FAMILY OF
THOMAS HASTINGS MUS. D.
NEW YORK CITY.

No. 40.

Thomas Hastings, second son of Dr. Seth and Eunice Parmele Hastings, born in Washington, Conn., October 15, 1784; died in New York City, May 15, 1872.

Married, at Buffalo, N. Y., September 15, 1822, Mary Seymour, daughter of Norman Seymour, who was descended from Richard Seymour, one of the first settlers of Hartford, Conn. She was born August 10, 1788; died in New York City, May 16, 1880.

Thomas Hastings devoted his life to the improvement of church music, and "whatever true reforms were made in the spirit of praise during the first half of the present century were largely accomplished by and through him." "His early labors as editor and compiler of musical works were invaluable to the church at large," and he was the author of many beautiful hymns.

"As widely as he was known and beloved in his public labors, those only knew him well who were accustomed to meet him in social life. He had a marvelous kindness of heart, a serenity of temper, and a gentleness of manner rarely found in men. * * * * Yet, childlike as he was in spirit, there was nevertheless in and about him a personal force, a depth of feeling, a clearness of conviction, a rigidity of purpose, a manly piety—and all so united, so tempered and refined—that few could resist his influence."

To the last he retained the free use of his faculties, his habits of study and of work, and a lively interest in the public affairs of the church and the world. A few days of illness, in which he suffered little bodily pain, closed his long and well-spent life in the eighty-eighth year of his age.

A writer in The Evangelist thus describes Thomas Hastings, the man: "I knew him in the late '50s as a Christian layman. He was at that time leading the choir of Dr. Hutton's Church, on Washington Square, New York, and teaching a Bible class of young men in the Sunday school.

Mr. Hastings' tall form and face, almost buried in his Bible, eyes closely guarded with double glasses, his earnest manner, clear and forcible teaching, are vividly recalled. He was then engaged on the early books of the Old Testament, tracing in the Tabernacle worship the foreshadowings of Christ. In his teaching everything led up to Him, no matter what book of the collections he might have in hand.

"It was natural, when I began to think seriously of the religious life, that I should seek his counsel, and I shall never forget the evening spent in his Amity Street home (so well-known to many of the arriving and departing missionaries of those days), and the fatherly way in which he received me, and his plain and simple exposition of the meaning of faith. A few years before his death, during a summer visit to relatives in Geneva, N. Y., I found him still the same; even his physical vigor remained, for he would run up stairs like a boy, and did, I believe, almost to the last.

"In after years, during winter visits to New York, I several times saw Mrs. Hastings at the house of her son, and noted the deep yet unaffected piety which had characterized her husband. Religion was a very real thing to her, and was carried into every event of life, no matter how trivial. Such saints as these are to be cherished in our memories, and should be inspirers of our lives."

FAMILY OF
ORLANDO HASTINGS,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

No. 42.

Orlando Hastings, son of Dr. Seth and Eunice Parmele Hastings, born in Washington, Conn., March 7, 1789; died in Rochester, N. Y., March 19, 1861, aged 72 years.

He early left home to pursue his studies at the Academy in Cherry Valley, and he afterward studied law in Clinton, and in 1818 he began the practice of his profession in Geneseo, N. Y. After some years spent there he removed to Rochester in 1830, and for many years was one of the leading lawyers of western New York.

The striking characteristic of his mind was clearness and quickness of perception and soundness of judgment. He readily received and marshaled the facts of the case before him, and applied with just discrimination the principles of law applicable to them. Hence he was a safe counsellor. He was also an able advocate. He possessed the faculty of presenting the arguments which had convinced himself of the truth and justice of his cause, so clearly and simply, and yet so forcibly to the court and jury, as generally to convince them. He was always heard with pleasure, for his address was characterized by strong, good sense.

He never undertook the management of a case if he thought the person who sought to engage him was not actuated by proper motives, and he never refused to undertake a case because the person who sought his assistance was poor and unable to pay him. He went about everywhere with an open heart and open hand, and displayed the same liberality in his calling at the law as he showed to the poor in his daily walks. Hundreds and thousands, who had nothing to pay, have gone to him and found advice and help in every species of difficulty.

For tenderness of sympathy Mr. Hastings was one of a thousand, and I have never known a heart more susceptible to kindness or more easily moved with sympathy for the wants and woes of others.

His was a life rendered beautiful and holy by the daily observance of every Christian virtue, and he loved the interests of the church as his own life.

Orlando Hastings married, first, November 12, 1812, Elizabeth Clark, daughter of John and Ann Emmons Clark, of Clinton, and sister of Huldah Clark, who married Dr. Seth Hastings, Jr. She was born in Colchester, Conn., June 29, 1789; died in Geneseo, N. Y., November 15, 1818.

Albert Merwin Hastings graduated at Hamilton College in the class of 1848, studied law with his father, and was admitted to the bar in 1850. After several years of successful law practice, he engaged in business and became President and Superintendent of the Rochester Paper Company.

He was for many years a leading member of the Central Presbyterian Church, and was president of its Board of Trustees.

He was one of the originators of the Oratorio Society, being president of the organization from the beginning, and in musical circles he was esteemed as one of the most enlightened and liberal patrons of the higher phases of musical culture.

"Though he never entered public life, Mr. Hastings had the clearest and most decided views upon public questions, whether they were of national or local significance. His clear intelligence was too discriminating to be imposed upon, and those who knew him learned to rely upon his judgment. Firm in his convictions and positive in character, he was also a man of broad and tender sympathies, and personally and socially he was one of the most genial and companionable of men."

FAMILY OF
EUROTAS PARMELE HASTINGS,
DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

No. 43.

Eurotas Parmele Hastings, son of Dr. Seth and Eunice Parmele Hastings, born at Washington, Conn., July 20, 1791; died at Detroit, Mich., June 1, 1866. He was a merchant in partnership with his brother Orlando, in Clinton, in 1816. Two years later he became a clerk in Utica. He then went to Geneva, N. Y., as a clerk in the Bank of Geneva. He became cashier, and removed to Detroit in February, 1825, to accept the presidency of the Bank of Michigan, which had been organized in 1818; was the first banking institution west of Rochester, N. Y. He was president of this bank for fourteen years, resigning in 1839. He was elected Auditor-General of the State and served in 1840-42, doing valuable service by his financial ability.

In 1842 he was appointed official assignee in bankruptcy, and this office he held for the remainder of his life. During the first few years in that position he settled six hundred cases in bankruptcy, aggregating millions of dollars.

A recent communication to the Detroit Tribune says: "The confidence of the public in the honesty and administrative ability of Mr. Hastings was supreme, and from a very early day he was constantly called upon to act as trustee, administrator, receiver, and assignee in estates, and in cases pending in court. So scrupulously exact was he in the performance of these duties that when the bankruptcy act of 1843 became a law, he was chosen the official assignee, to act in all cases of bankruptcy. The importance of this trust can hardly be estimated at this day, for he handled the property of every bankrupt in the State of Michigan coming within this law. Notwithstanding the vast amount of money that had passed through his hands, so little was retained by him that at the time of his death, in 1866, his estate was not administered by the probate court."

Another old friend writes: "I had the honor to know Mr. Hastings; he was very prominent in the group of consistent and honest Presbyterians of Detroit of his time. Had Mr. Hastings and Edward Bingham, his associate in religious work, placed at ten per cent interest the money they contributed to the calls for home and outside religious work, instead of dying poor, both would have died, probably, as rich as Vanderbilt."

The following description of his personal appearance is of interest as portraying a gentleman of the old school: "He was then (1835) 44 years of age, of medium stature, and of slender frame, being about five feet nine inches in height, and weighing about one hundred and thirty pounds, with a healthy but somewhat pallid complexion. His dark hair was thin and sprinkled with gray, and his eyes were black and expressive. He had a well-shaped head and a scholarly, clean-shaven face, and was a good-looking, prepossessing man. He was always well dressed in orthodox black, like all professional persons, and wore a high beaver hat and black silk stock. In cold weather his usual outside garment was a Boston wrapper, as it was called, of black or brown cloth, quilted and lined with silk, and coming below his knees. He was quick in his motions, and cordial, cheery, and inviting in his speech and manner. He was a man of strong likes and dislikes, but he never carried the latter beyond the limits of good sense and courtesy."

He married, first, January 26, 1819, Electa Owen, of Geneva; she died February 20, 1821. Second, Mrs. Philena (Field) Moody, of Geneva, August 23, 1826; she died of cholera in Detroit, August 16, 1834. Third, Mrs. Theodosia (DeVeaux) Petit, October 14, 1835. She died March 4, 1863. He had five children, all of whom he survived:

395. EUROTAS FRANCIS HASTINGS, born May 24, 1820; died July 14, 1820.

396. HENRY DWIGHT HASTINGS, born June 25, 1827; died February 1, 1850; was a civil engineer.

450. SOPHIA ELIZABETH HASTINGS was born January 20, 1829. Married, May 26, 1847, Robert Lind Douglass. He was son of Robert and Sarah Coombs Douglass, of Hagerstown, Md., where he was born, March 18, 1814; died November 28, 1877. He graduated at the age of twenty-one from Rutgers College in the class of 1833. He studied law with Edwin M. Stanton, and removed to Angola, Indiana. He afterwards lived in Lima, Indiana, and in 1855 he moved to Council Bluffs, Iowa. He was elected Circuit Judge in 1867, and also held many other offices of trust, discharging every duty with honor and fidelity. The following is taken from a notice in the leading paper of the city at the time of his death: 'Judge Douglass' life was one of more than ordinary activity and usefulness. And now that that life is ended, his great personal and professional worth and character, his high standing in the social circles of the community, and his established reputation as a successful lawyer and an upright jurist, furnish a fitting and sufficient epitaph. A man of excellent judgment and a shrewd observer of men, Judge Douglass combined with these qualifications unquestioned integrity and untiring industry." He was all his life an earnest student of the best literature, and many curious and rare volumes were found in his library.

Robert Lind and Sophia Hastings Douglass had two children. Their eldest son born and died December, 1848. A second son, Charles Hastings Douglass, born December 16, 1849; died February 27, 1855.

Y., July 11, 1864. Some years after their marriage they lived in Wilmington, Vt., where they owned a farm. Mr. Hamilton owned a line of stages, which ran between Bennington and Brattleboro, across the mountain, Wilmington being about midway between the two points. They had three sons:

ern College of Physicians and Surgeons at Fairfield, N. Y. He received his medical degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1835, and began the practice of medicine in Auburn, N. Y. He visited Europe in 1843-44, and in 1846 he became Professor of Surgery in the Buffalo Medical College. On the organization of the Long Island College Hospital in 1859, he was called to fill the chair of Principles and Practice of Surgery, and he was also chosen surgeon-in-chief of the hospital.

At the beginning of the Civil War he accompanied the Thirty-first New York Regiment to the front, and had charge of the general field hospital in Centreville during the first battle of Bull Run. For nearly two years he remained in the army, being promoted several times, but he resigned in February, 1863, and returned to his duties in Bellevue Hospital Medical College, where he had been appointed Professor of Military Surgery and Attending Surgeon to the hospital. He was also consulting surgeon to other hospitals and to various city dispensaries, and in that capacity Dr. Hamilton had few equals. He invented many surgical instruments, and was the first to introduce gutta percha as a splint for irregular joint surfaces. The transplanting of new skin in closing old ulcers has been repeatedly attributed to him by both French and German writers. He performed successfully many extremely difficult operations, and his descriptions of improved processes are numerous. He was a large contributor to medical journals, and many of his special memoirs are accepted as authorities.

He was a member of various medical societies, and was President of the New York State Medical Society, 1855; of the New York Pathological Society, 1866; of the New York Medico-Legal Society, 1875-76; of the American Academy of Medicine, 1878, and of the New York Society of Medical Jurisprudence, 1878-85. RECORD OF THE FAMILY OF HULDAH AND ELIZABETH CLARK.

Since two of the sons of Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr., Dr. Seth Hastings, Jr., and Orlando Hastings, married two sisters, daughters of John Clark, their descendants will be interested in the following Clark record. It is very kindly furnished by Mrs. Julia Hamilton Otis, of Orange, N. J., and by Mrs. Charles D. Adams, née Mary Wood, daughter of Harriet Clark and the late George Wood, Esq., of Utica, N. Y.

THE CLARK FAMILY.

Archibald Clark, Laird of Doolittle, County Midlothian, was a junior member of the old family of Clark, of Comrie Castle, County of Perth. He was descended from Sir Alamus Clark, who flourished about 1349, when his name appears on several royal patents.

This Archibald Clark, Laird of Doolittle, was employed as assistant secretary to King James I., whom he accompanied to England upon his accession to the throne.

The Laird of Doolittle was a disciple of John Knox, and so long as James lived he enjoyed his royal patron's protection from persecution. But upon the death of King James, Archibald Clark and his two sons were obliged to flee to Holland, where he dropped the name of Clark and was called Doolittle.

In 1643 one of his sons, John Doolittle, came to America, and settled in Lynn, Mass. His brother returned to England from Holland. He was a Puritan minister, and Cromwell gave him the living of St. Botolph, in London, of which he was deprived by King Charles II. in 1661. Four years later he came to Massachusetts, arriving in 1665. From these two brothers the Doolittles of New England are descended.

In Utica, N. Y., there are representatives of both families, own cousins, some bearing the name of Clark and some that of Doolittle. Erastus Clark and Thomas Emmons Clark, lawyers; Robert Williams, President of the Bank of Oneida, Utica, and brother of Wells Williams and of Dwight Williams, of China, married Abbie Doolittle, daughter of Charles Doolittle, of Utica, and own cousin of the Clarks.

This Charles Doolittle was a brother of Irena Wetmore (Doolittle) Walcott, whose daughter, Elizabeth Walcott, married Edwin Chauncey Hamilton, son of Lydia Hastings and Chauncey Hamilton. (See record of Elijah Hastings.)

His wife was Mindwell Gillett, who was born in Windsor, Conn., in 1697, and died in Colchester, May 9, 1784, in the 87th year of her age. Her father, Josiah Gillett, was born in Windsor, Conn., and was one of the first settlers in Colchester, moving there in 1702. His father, Jonathan Gillett, sailed from England in the "Mary and John," May 20, 1630. John and Mindwell Gillett Clark had six children:

THE PARMELE FAMILY.

Thomas Parmele, of Washington, Conn., whose eldest daughter, Eunice Parmele, married Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr., was the second in a family of twelve children. He had eight sisters and three brothers: Benjamin, older than himself, and two, John Gould Parmele and Reuben Parmele, younger.

Thomas Parmele was born July 31, 1742. He first married, when he was twenty years old, Elizabeth Roots, who was eighteen, having been born January 16, 1744. They were married September 15, 1762. She was the mother of three children, and died in Washington, Conn., June 2, 1780. Her children were:

EUNICE PARMELE, born December 30, 1763; married Dr. Hastings.

THOMAS TRUMAN PARMELE, born April 6, 1767; died August 11, 1800.

SHELDON PARMELE, born March 16, 1770; died December 23, 1807.

Thomas Parmele removed to Clinton about 1797, or perhaps earlier, as there were many additions to the first settlement at Clinton during the year 1789, and we find three of the Curtiss family among the number. Thomas Parmele had married Olive Curtiss for his second wife, October 15, 1781, and these early Clinton settlers were doubtless her relatives. One of them, Samuel Curtiss, was a soldier in the Revolution, and he was probably a brother of Olive Curtiss Parmele. He was born in 1747, and died in Clinton, 1833. Olive Curtiss was born April 9, 1752, and died in Clinton, February 25, 1836. Her two sons were:

CURTISS STILES PARMELE, born July 28, 1784; died November 13, 1869. He married Anna Stanton, who lived to the great age of 104 years. Both husband and wife are buried in the old cemetery in Clinton.

ASA HARMON PARMELE, born June 8, 1786; died July 22, 1814, aged 28 years. He married, June 1, 1807, Emily Cole. Their daughter, Chloe Parmele, married Hon. Geo. Hastings, 1847. (See pp. 39-41.)

ELIZABETH OLIVE PARMELE,

SARAH ANN PARMELE,

EUNICE ANN PARMELE were the three youngest children of Thomas and Olive Parmele.

The graves of Thomas Parmele, his wife Olive, his two sons, Curtiss Stiles Parmele and Asa Harmon Parmele, and also those of Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr., and his wife, Eunice Parmele Hastings, are in the old cemetery at Clinton.

A "Record of Burials in the Old Clinton Burying Ground" during the century of its existence was published in 1896.

The Parmeles were early settlers of Guilford, Conn., John Parmele having emigrated from England in 1639.

APPENDIX I.

THE following fragment, written in the fine, clear hand of Dr. Seth Hastings, Sr., may be of interest to some of his descendants:

HISTORY OF THE PRESENT WAR—THE HAPPY ÆRA WHEN THE UNITED STATES BECAME A BAND OF BROTHERS,
SEPTEMBER 25, 1774.

At the battle of Lexington the war commenced, on the side of Britain, with America, by the fire of Major Pitcairn's pistol. The Divine hand was manifested in an extraordinary manner, in causing the flower of the British Veterans, who were grandly equipped for war, to flee with precipitation before a few undisciplined farmers, April 19, 1775.

Charlestown was burned on the 17th of June, in the same year. The incessant play of cannon from their shipping, from Boston and their wings in various directions, together with the fire of musketry from more than four times our number, all heightened ye majestic terror of the field, exhibiting a scene most awful and tremendous. Their beauteous order and their grand array were broken, and repeatedly filled with astonishment and dread! Ticonderoga and St. John fell into our hands about this time. By this means we were fortunately supplied with, to us then, very valuable artillery and stores.

[Arnold's expedition to Canada is next described, but here some pages are missing, and the arrival of Burgoyne is the next incident noted.]

An account of "about 500 of our troops who were captivated by ye Indians," being a "detachment commanded by then Major (now Colonel) Sherburne," follows, and, "like so many bloodhounds, the Indians contended furiously for their prey a whole hour! Yea, so inflamed were they that it was not without the most inconceivable difficulties, by large presents, by solemn promises, and by ye most melting eloquence, that they were prevailed upon to spare those pitiable, destined victims. The Pagans boastingly declared that never before had they exercised such lenity on any similar occasion, as their old, invariable custom was always to drink the blood of the first captive which fell into their hands at the beginning of a war."

Several pages are filled with an account of the movements of the army in the Ticonderoga region, and then comes a description of the situation about New York:

"Our principal tryal was on Long Island, August 28th; not less than six times our numbers were at once opposed to us. The contest was long and sharp; each side fought with various success. Britons and Hessians were faithful to the Crown, and our free-born Countrymen supported their recent Arms with terror and reputation. But at last ye Superiority of the enemy prevailed. Being now in imminent danger of having our communication with York Island cut off by the Shipping, it was judged expedient to retreat. In this hazardous attempt a remarkable fog, the wind and tide, in a most singular manner wonderfully conspired to lend their aid. By this means our escape was happily facilitated, and we brought off, as it were, a prey out of the hands of the enemy. Had they improved the advantage in their hands, we must now have suffered inexpressible loss and damage in the City of New York. But so overruled were they by Him who is higher than the highest, that we had time to remove our Artillery, Stores, baggage, and various other articles of value before their descent on the city. As this Island was commanded by ye sea and ye heights of Long Island, it was our highest wisdom to repair to the Continent (September 14). The British General was wholly bent either to Surround our army or else provoke us to a general battle, and after several less actions and much Splendid parade in the rout to White Plains, a very smart engagement commenced between this huge host of the enemy and a few of our regiments, in which our people acquitted themselves like men. But it being a part of our Fabian General's plan not to risque the freedom of America in one general action, we left ye field with Prudence and honor. The enemy gave over their Pursuit, and returned with shame."

The "history" continues down to the repulse of the American troops at Brandywine, and closes with a list of eight "general officers who have fallen in battle fighting for freedom."

APPENDIX II.

A COLONIAL LOVE LETTER.

SHARON, May, 1774.

Having this morning relived by myself, with your Charms surrounding, nothing could give ease to my mind — nothing but those hours with which you made me blest. And happy am I, even ye happiest man alive, if you still continue to be faithful. But how unhappy must I feel when knowing myself in a Strange land, Surrounded by many who wish ye Dissolution of our friendship, and are now desiring and designing our entire overthrow. But can I fear? Yet I do, that they may shake your resolutions, tho' they be never so true and faithfully. * * * Yet I must believe you sincere in ye professions of friendship, for can so foul a monster as deceit dwell in ye heart of one who is possest of so fair a face. Surely they cannot. Neither will I believe you unfaithful, or untrue, until by Your behaviour you make it appear evident. And relying on your Goodness, I devote to you this heart of mine to be at ye disposal of your will, not doubting of your readiness to grant me any reasonable request; therefore, I now make this request only that you would ye first opportunity make your words manifest by your behaviour, which you can easily do, by either giving me a flat denial, or renounce ye addresses of others. If you chuse to listen to any other rather than myself; and think it most to your happiness; or expect to find a truer or faithfuller friend than you can find in me, you are now at Liberty this day to make your Choice. But I would let you know that as I expect soon to return home to be absent from your Sight, My returning again to visit depends entirely on your giving full evidence of your respect to me. Which should you be pleas'd to grant will be a full recompence for all ye trouble which is in ye power of any one to create. I must conclude by borrowing a few lines from a poet, tho' ye tho'ts are my own.

For where love enters he will rule alone,
And suffers no copartner in his throne;
Did you perceive ye torments I endure,
Which caus'd and you alone can cure,
They would your virgin soul to pity move;
And pity may at last be chang'd to love.
A passion fain'd at no repulse is griev'd;
And vallues little if it ben't receiv'd,
But love Sincere resents ye smallest scorn,
And ye unkindness doth in secret mourn.

From a faithful friend,

SETH HASTINGS.

APPENDIX III.

WHILE not properly belonging in any way to the record, the following pages, selected from my father's papers, may be of interest to the antiquarians of the family:

AN ELEGY OCCASIONED BY THE DEATH OF THE MUCH LAMENTED
DOCT. THOMAS HASTINGS, OF HATFIELD, WHO DIED APRIL 14, 1728, AGED 48 YEARS.

As the Swift word abounds
Men are by Death cut down,
Death seizeth all,
Piercing Poor, Rich, Great, Small,
As mighty sounds of joy and mirth
Are frequent at a Royal Birth.
There's at their change as mournful Sound
By Multitudes on Mournful ground.
All numbers of the Commontry
They're turn'd to Dust Successively;
Yet of the Worthy we've still read,
Their names shall live when they are Dead.
Hiperbolick Encomeums,
Are Cyphers-like, and make no Sums;
Immoderate Griefs they are likewise,
Like Oyl's unsavory made, by flys.
Just dues we own may still be pay'd
To such when in a Balance laid,
Are worthy found their Names should live,
Survivors then such Justice give
To HASTINGS who of late did fall
Into the Grave that swallows all.
The Multitude of Human Host,
And crys to all give up the Ghost.
This Grave of old hath ever said,
I'm never fill'd though ever fed.
When Millions in her womb abide,
Yet still she crys not satisfy'd.
Peasants and Kings alike there meet
Proud Sisera bow'd at her feet;

When Jael's Nail is Hammer'd in,
She spareth none, though Dye in sin.
She holds all in her Chambers fast,
Till the Arch Angel sound at last.
And never will let go her hands
Till Christ shall break her Iron Bands.
The Eating of Forbidden Fruit,
Which made it thus should make us Mute.
When nearest Friends are thither sent,
Let us submit, but most Lament.
The loss of such of Publick use,
That rare the like we can produce;
Then Hatfield mourn, now HASTINGS Dead,
And say a Crown fell from our Head:
Who with his Head, his Hand, and Heart,
For Publick Good did play his Part;
His Gifts abroad they soon appear'd,
His timely words in Courts were heard;
His words were like Apples of Gold,
In Silver Pictures, yea behold!
His Benefits by Declarations,
In Golden Words at Arbitrations;
That he lov'd Peace and did it seek,
Yea, it pursu'd let Hatfield speak.
For Surgery, where is the Man?
And Physicks both find if you can.
From far to Him there many came
For cures, and cur'd when sick and lame.
On Horse or Beds many were bro't
With aking Hearts, who thus have tho't
Oh! doleful Day thou fear'st the Date
Of Curing us, when 'tis too late.
His Courage, Skill, and Tenderness
Still them relieved in Distress.
In Health and Strength from him they went
With Joyful Hearts unto their Tent.
All knew him just in recompence,
Nor overrate in the expense.
Many Babes did HASTINGS save
Young to their little grave.
Hastig in Cold thro' winds and Snow
To stay their Fits HASTINGS did go;

Thy praise may to this Doctor give,
Whose Skillful Means hath made them live.
Let such, indeed, much more Petition
Unto the Heart and Good Physician,
For Him to cure a Malady
That eats the Soul Eternally.
He also saved in riper Age
From Sorer fits and Burning Rage.
No other thing, to say the truth,
Like those had he renew'd their youth.
Shall He, of all, have least regards
For flourishing in Lyons' yards?
Should HASTINGS' Name then be forgot,
Like Wicked Men's, forever rot?
At this our Hearts may surely burst;
Then should not such as are the first
To make to Him an Elegy
That's name may never live and dye?
Come, Hampshire, now; come sit and weep,
At loss of what you're wont to reap
At HASTINGS' Hands; who now is gone
And left no such Physician.
His Soul, we trust, doth now receive
Those things on Earth he did believe:
God's Body shall in Glory rise—
Yea, made like CHRIST's, to his surprise.
His Prudent Wife, that knows his Loss,
Let her Submit and bear the Cross,
And to the Lord her case commit,
Who is all-Wise and know's what's fit
For all of his while here below,
Till Heaven He on them bestow.
His Children, now in tender Years,
Amidst their Joys and Youthful Cheers.
Come, hearken to true Wisdom's voice,
And, Mary-like, come make your choice;
The chiefest of Ten Thousands chuse,
Tho' Fools by Thousands Him refuse.

AN ACROSTICK.

To's Children, which are now bereft
His Vertues, have a Glory left.
O that they all on Laws Divine
Might Meditate, and not Decline
Away from Truth to Vanity.
Sure such are wise the Truth that Buy.

His Virtuous Life and Usefulness
Are worthy things, and do express
Some noble Donor whence they came;
They sure deserve a lasting Name.
Justice, indeed, it calls for, then;
Not mine, but for a better Pen.
Gifts still we own are from above;
Such, well improved, are Gifts in Love.

Sic cicinit dolens amicus.

JOSEPHUS NASH.

These lines were printed on a large, heavily-bordered sheet of paper. A wide, black line through the center added to its mournful look. It is in the possession of F. W. Hastings, of Bradford, Pa., and was lent by him to the editor. Its perusal will, doubtless, be a source of satisfaction to those of the family antiquarians whose curiosity may have been aroused by Mrs. Buckminster's allusion in the "Memorial" to the "quaint, unpoetical, but flattering eulogy, and acrostic."

APPENDIX IV.

A LETTER WRITTEN BY DR. THOMAS HASTINGS, JR., OF HATFIELD.
(1679-1728.)

DIFFICULT cases of surgery were often sent out of town from East Windsor, Conn., to be placed under the care of famous physicians. One case in particular is mentioned, as this letter indicates.

FOR HIS MUCH RESPECTED FRIEND, HENRY WOLCOTT, AT HIS HOUSE IN WINDSOR:

Respected Sr — My service being presented to you & to ye rest of my masters, these may acquaint you that I have, through God's blessing, performed a cure upon Godman Denslow's lad, though with a great deal of difficulty, care, and trouble. It Remains, therefore, upon your part to perform what you have Ingaged; his Diet and dressing at 4s. per week, amounts to ten pounds and six shillings. What I have expended in medecine and otherwise, of which I shall give you a true account, amounts to twenty-seven pounds. I desire you to take some effectual course that I may be paid; for I can truly affirm that I am at least Indamaged ten pounds by ye lad, though I should not (as I hope I shall not) meet with difficulty in getting what is my due. I propose to see you next week, and if it may be, I desire that my pay may be ready against I come down. I have not at present to add, but that I am sr,

Your friend & servant, THOMAS HASTINGS.

HATFIELD, Decembr ye 11, 1685.

Copied from Stiles' "Ancient Windsor," page 455.

This account of a case treated by Dr. Thomas Hastings, Jr., of Hatfield (1679-1728), is kindly furnished by Mrs. Sophia Hastings Douglass, having been copied verbatim from "Border Massacres in Massachusetts."

The enemy wounded Deacon Sam'l Field, of Deerfield, August 25, 1725, a Ball passing thro' the Right hyps condria, cutting of three Plaits of ye Messeteria, wch hung out of ye Wound in Length almost 2 inches, wch was cut of Even w^th body, ye Bullet Passing between ye Lowest and ye Next Rib, cutting at its going forth part of Lowest Rib. His hand being close to his body Where the Ball came forth, entered at ye Root of the (heel) of the Thumb, cutting ye bone of ye forefinger. Rested between ye fore and 2nd finger, was cut out and all ye wounds cured in less than 3 weeks by Dr. Thos. Hastings.

APPENDIX VI.

"THE CALL OF DR. JUDD"—A ROMANCE OF PARIS HILL AND CLINTON.
THE MISSIONARY AND HIS BRIDE.

THE following poem is of historical value, as it relates to the call of one who was one of the earliest of the missionaries to the Sandwich Islands, and who was one of the ablest and most efficient workers in redeeming those islands from barbarism and elevating them to a recognized place in the family of nations.

Dr. Gerrit P. Judd was the son of Dr. Elnathan Judd, of Paris Hill, in this county. His mother was the sister of Dr. Seth Hastings, of Clinton, whose son, now a missionary in Ceylon, married a sister of ex-President Cleveland. Orlando Hastings, a distinguished lawyer of Rochester, and Dr. Thomas Hastings, formerly of Utica, and a distinguished musical author, were also her brothers.

This poem was written by Hon. S. G. Arnold, a nephew of Dr. Judd, the missionary, and he says that the story is entirely authenticated, as he had it from the lips of Dr. Judd's mother.

In a note accompanying this poem, Mr. Arnold says: "At the time of the marriage, Dr. Judd must have been about twenty-five years old. The lady was Miss Laura Fish. She left notes of her life at the Islands, which have been published since her death. They sailed from Boston in the Partheon, and after a voyage of about six months reached Honolulu at the end of March, 1828. Dr. Judd was one of the chief actors in creating the Hawaiian Government, and was for many years Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. His history is the history of a people redeemed from barbarism. When he landed he was welcomed by a crowd of natives, mostly naked. When he died the Islands had a resident minister at Washington." And we may add here, that the wife of the present resident minister there is the daughter of this Dr. Judd, whose "call" to the missionary work is so pleasantly set forth by Mr. Arnold. H.

THE CALL OF DR. JUDD.

Some fifty years ago—it may be more—
In plainer, simpler times, and long before
The cunning Morse had taught us how to use
The swift-wing'd lightnings to convey our news,
A young physician plied his healing skill
Back, in the Empire State, at Paris Hill.

Descended from a good New England stock
That dated back to famous Plymouth Rock,
Comely and social, courteous and refined,
Of manly form and cultivated mind—
A pleasant home and prospects fair ahead—
He still was solus, he remained unwed.
The god of love had sent no barbed dart
To flutter and confuse his beating heart.

At length the chaplain of a "man-of-war,"
Returned but late from China's seas afar,
Restless on land, impelled to roving still;
In his wide wanderings chanced on Paris Hill;
And in the village church on Sabbath morn
Told of his sail around the stormy Horn;
Of far-off isles, where tropic fruits abound,
And tribes of men in savage life are found,
Needing the guiding-hand of Christian love
To lead them gently to the life above.

A fitly-spoken word! ah, who can weigh?
Who tell its power to fill, or move, or sway?
How it enkindles faith, or love, or strife,
And, in a moment, changes plans of life?
We can not tell; and hence the stern command
To sow at morn—at eve to stay no hand:
For what will prosper thou canst seldom know,

Since God must send the rain that makes it grow.
Sow in the morning—sow throughout the day—
And trust to timely shower and warming ray,
Resting in hope that “this or that” may bring
The rich fruition of the hope of spring.

The way-side seed, dropped then and there,
Fell on “good ground” that did not fail to bear.
Thenceforth our country hero knew no rest;
Strange yearnings moved him, and his manly breast
Heaved with new motives, cravings and desires —
New-birth of love which God alone inspires.
A heavy burden on his spirit lay,
A “still, small voice,” was calling him away,
And he must haste the summons to obey.

Those fairy isles, in chains of darkness bound,
In his young heart a growing interest found,
And business, honors, friendships—one and all —
Must yield their claims to this diviner call.
The mandate came as Summer storm-clouds come,
Dark’ning around the cherished joys of home.
The sire and mother moved about with sighs;
Sisters and brothers heard with weeping eyes;
But up they looked, and after prayers were said
They bade him go with blessings on his head.

His purpose strengthened and his mind at rest,
Returning peace swelled once again his breast;
And, turning from his home, he took his way,
In nothing doubting and without delay,
To distant Boston, where the “Board” would meet
A pending expedition to complete.
Arrived, he showed his letters — bared his heart —
Said he was trained to ply the healing art;
Was healthy, young, the child of pious care,
And free to render service anywhere;
Had prayed, considered, looked the matter through
And did not doubt the course he should pursue.

The Reverend Fathers were not hard to please,
And soon their youthful guest was much at ease.
The Doctor’s skill, they said, was in demand
At every mission-post, in every land;
And now, at Islands in a distant main,

Where the lamented Cook was foiled and slain,
The infant mission had a place to fill
Requiring Christian work and healing skill.
Would he incline to cast his lot with these
And have his life-work in these far-off seas?

No further explanation did he wait;
Not for a moment did he hesitate.
This was the field which first had fixed his thought;
This was the opening which by prayer he sought;
And gladly would he join them on the day
That they embarked upon their stormy way.

There was a pause, as if some doubt, unsolved,
These reverend men still silently resolved.
At length one said, in doubtful undertone:
"You should not join this company alone.
The service, as you mean it, is for life.
You'll therefore need a home. Have you a wife?"

The young man's face was instantly aglow,
As, with embarrassed air, he answered "No."
Then, when his flutter was but half assuaged,
Again was asked: "Perhaps you are engaged?"
He scarcely answered, for no word he said,
But with decisive mien he shook his head.

The spokesman then rejoined: "The ship must sail
At the set time arranged, and without fail.
If you would go, think not," he gravely said,
"To go without a mate — to go unwed.
For many years—for life—you may remain,
And living thus alone were worse than vain.
There, more than elsewhere, blessings crown the wife,
And home must be the golden charm of life;
Your place to gather courage, banish fear,
Your inspiration, refuge, comfort, cheer.
If not engaged nor wed, have you not met
Some genial Christian woman you can get?"
The Doctor, with a twinkle in his eye,
Smiled as he briefly answered: "I might try."

On his long journey home his roving thought
Ran through his friendships and the fair one sought.
It seemed at last to settle calmly down
On a young teacher of a neighboring town

Whom seldom he had met, but well he knew
Was pious, good, intelligent and true.
Fair, too, she was — a queen to fill the eye;
Graceful and tall, with forehead broad and high,
Complexion freshly tinged, and soft brown hair,
A carriage noble, and a courtly air.
In school and chapel she had filled his eye,
And well he knew her worth and prized it high;
But not a vagrant thought had crossed his mind
Of life with her in wedded love combined.
And now on errand bent from his own land
Would she not shrink the tender of his hand.

Disturbed in thought, his fate unsettled still,
He reached his loving home at Paris Hill,
And called his friends around in consultation
That they might know and help the situation.
“The Board,” he said, “with better means of light,
Had well advised. He felt that they were right,
But how to meet so grave a problem here,
In the brief time allowed, was far from clear.
Of all his female friends there was but one
Toward whom the current of his thought would run,
And scarce he dared to think that one so fair
Would leave her home his toils and cares to share.
But duty called; and this he had to say,
That God, thus far, had gently cleared his way.
Hastings, his uncle, he would hence command
To break to her the matter now in hand.”

Hastings at once the needful time bestowed,
And rode to Clinton, where the maid abode,
Was warmly welcomed by the lady fair,
And, with a brusque and business sort of air,
Proceeded thus his errand to declare:
“Our mission work,” he said, “so dear to all,
Is pressing on us with a louder call,
And, as of old, the Saviour’s words are true,
‘Great is the harvest and the laborers few.’
To find more laborers I have come to-day,
Speed you my errand and I will away.
In short, would you incline, should it appear
That need was great — the way of duty clear —

APPENDIX VI.

To leave your pleasant home where plenty smiles
 And go afar to lonely savage isles,
 That you might help to lift from low estate
 Rude, savage men, else doomed to beastly fate?"

"The question, most momentous, put by you,
 Is not," she said, "so altogether new,
 But oft has pressed itself upon my view.
 The wrongs of life 't were pleasant to redress,
 Its pressing needs should find a hand to bless,
 And if the way were clear I do not think
 My faith would fail or I should dare to shrink."

"But," he replied, "perchance the call should be
 Where the Hawaiian Isles rise from the sea—
 Far in the great Pacific's watery sheen,
 With many a month of weary sail between—
 To vulgar tribes, low down, unkempt, and vile,
 Whose very rudeness might provoke a smile,
 If such the call would you decline to go?"

"Would they accept my help?" she answered, "No."

One question more upon his lips still lay—
 One question more and he can go his way:
 "If, then, you would not shrink thus far to go
 In lifting men from savage vice and woe,
 Will you on such an errand cross the flood
 As—well—the wife of Dr. Gerrit Judd?"

All color from her face impromptu fled,
 And then rushed back a tide of burning red;
 And then, confused, her hands concealed her face.
 And then the tears crept down her cheeks apace;
 And then, again, she brushed aside the dew,
 And let a smile, like morning light, break through.
 But, calmer soon, though agitated still,
 She whispered soft to Hastings, "Yes, I will!"

My tale is done, and I must here desist,
 The parties, as you may guess, met, blushed, and kissed.
 Next, they were married, and they did not fail
 To join their friends and take the long-drawn sail.

Their praises you have heard on every hand;
In all the churches and throughout the land.
Labor and love subdued untimely tears,
Success and honor filled the rolling years,
And in full age, with children gathered round,
The land redeemed —with richest blessings crowned —
Still at their island home they sank to rest,
To join the white-robed throng among the blest.

S. G. ARNOLD.
